

5. Support and ground the base

Are you supported? How do you support? Is your dream or new idea supported by reality, by others, by the world?

What supports your wealth container, your vision of a new you? Without support, your container will collapse. If the base is too small, it will topple over.

Will the base support your container, balance it and keep it grounded? Is your dream rooted in reality?

What is your reality? What and who supports your container?

Support comes from many sources – physical reality, extraordinary reality, self, others, and the Divine.

Acknowledge at the start that support is all around you. Become ready to receive support.

First find the base that is already there. If the ground beneath is shaky, find a more level spot.

Look. Listen. Pay attention. Ask the right questions.

What or who is supporting this venture? Who is going to make it happen?

You are the only one who will make it happen.

Know, quite clearly, that it starts and ends with you.

There is no one and nothing else that has a bearing on what you are about to create. No person, economy, currency, law, statistic, or factor outside of you can make it happen. Support starts with believing this completely.

First you support yourself. You believe in yourself, trust yourself, listen to yourself, talk to yourself, rely on yourself.

Know that you can deliver. Know that you can make it happen. Do you believe you can do it?

Will you back yourself? Would you invest in you?

Commit to making it happen. Stick your neck out and don't look back.

Support is believing and trusting and holding the doors of possibility open for things to unfold.

Support is also active – you need to take a step towards your goal.

The base of your container is the place of early action.

Up until now we have dealt with the stages of unmanifest creation, dreaming, the cocoon or seed phase of your creation through shape, walls, and material.

Shape represented your decision regarding choice of destination, goal, new beingness, and the cultivation of the right energy and feeling. Walls represented commitment to achieve and contain your goal through firming parameters and boundaries. You clarified what you will allow inside and what will remain outside your container. Material related to your ability and willingness to deliver, your dependability.

Now you are forming a base, putting down foundations.

You support your wealth vision though grounding it into reality with strong roots so your dream can unfold.

Up until now, we have been selecting and creating our seeds, now we plant these seeds so roots can grow.

Action will give you the power.

Beyond belief and commitment, preparing to receive, and connecting with the feeling of a new you and the destination of your journey, you must test your dream against physical reality itself.

Is there support for what you want to do?

In simple terms, what will make this work? Why should anyone support this dream? Would you support it? Why?

Do some simple mathematics – expenditure versus income. Look at what is there. What is obvious? What can you see? What are you not seeing?

Hold that question open, and wait for the answers to unfold.

Where is there support that you cannot see? Ask to be shown that also.

What will support the success of what you are doing? Money is never the answer!

What inspired action can you take today to lead you to the next level of your wealth journey?

There is always support: you just need to find it.

The answers are all around you, if you ask the right questions. Observe. Find the support from those around you, from within you, from the truth, from reality.

If these support your vision, then your container has a base.

If there is no support, no base, then you may need to re-assess your vision, for without a base your container will crumble.

Without a base you will be unable to contain – everything inside your container will simply flow away. Find your base.

Bank loans, funding, overdrafts or investors can never ensure the success of a venture. It's never money that supports or creates a successful venture.

Money is the by-product of a successful venture. Money is created from dreams.

Support your dream by supporting the dreams of others. This expands your heart as well as your base!
